The influence of the initial immunization strategy on the efficacy of different antigens was studied in an experimental, chimeric virus (E/W) vaccine against vesicular stomatitis virus. Both a standard regimen and a reduced immunization schedule were used. Each regimen consisted of two subcutaneous injections with either one of three different antigens or an equal mixture of the three antigens, respectively. The immune response to each antigen was determined. Following vaccination with a mixture of three antigens the humoral immune response was found to be significantly lower than the one induced by a standard regimen. All vaccination strategies had a positive influence on the humoral immune response to the virus and on the protective efficacy of the vaccine. The initial immunization schedule had a slight influence on the degree of the protective efficacy of the vaccine. In all immunization protocols, the administration of a mixture of E and W antigens induced a higher degree of protection against both type of viruses than single antigens.Q: Structure for PHP Regex I am trying to understand the structure of PHP regexes. I understand from several examples that I can do something like: `!^[a-z][a-z]{0-9}[a-z][a-z][a-z]$` So my questions are: Is this a valid regex? Can I replace the `[a-z]` with `+`? Is there anything wrong with the expression above? A: If you are looking to match a string that has only 4 letters, you would use: `!^(.4)$` You are able to have
