Video to 3D Model - Design a 3D model from video footage Category: Remote monitoring The success of virtual reality can be directly related to how well VR is integrated into the workplace. The VR industry is expanding rapidly, and Google, Facebook, and Microsoft are investing in developing their VR infrastructure in order to compete with this new technology. The Microsoft HoloLens is the most recent product that attempts to capitalize on this new trend by providing users with a ready-made wearable computer. A new company, called Businesses on Track (BOT) has developed its own HoloLens based on Windows 10. This article will focus on how BOT is moving their enterprise environment into VR by creating an immersive, interactive Microsoft Hololens experience in their offices. Main Features Businesses on Track has developed a HoloLens solution for Enterprise use by their clients. It is a commercial solution that can be used in every office setting and is built around HoloLens devices that users can purchase. Once a user has purchased their HoloLens they can connect and use the device in the office while looking through their windows and seeing what they will see when they walk around their room. Future Plan It is possible for BOT to continue pushing its horizon in the future with their HoloLens enabled Enterprise Solutions. By making their solutions open-source they allow any other company to take what they have done and use it or modify it to suit there needs. This is why it is important to develop for newer versions of HoloLens. The main thing is that in order to make this technology be successful it will need to be affordable, reliable, and scalable in order to get the most out of it. Introduction The most common task for a user when trying to access information is finding it. Businesses on track's goal is to allow their users to find what they need to find quickly and easily. By adding VR experiences to the workplace they can start incorporating this new technology that so many are trying to get into the workplace. In order for this to be successful though it will need to be affordable, reliable, and scalable. The problem with VR is that it is a very new technology, and it is hard to develop for something that has not been released yet. This is also why it is becoming more and more hard to be able to differentiate VR from the many platforms that are out there. A user will be able to add their own content into a HoloLens experience, which can be in a walk through type of experience
