And. We. Obey. Tenderness. 6 Family And Friends 6 Teacher's Book Free 89lkjh. 00:58:47 John Maclean/Brian Staveley, 2007. Write a friendly letter to friends and families of those who have been ill, about what the person means to them. Preferably four pages long. Feel free to write about people you are close to or are good friends with. The idea is to give a few lines of information about the person that have been ignored. For example, a description of their personality, favorite things, hobbies, etc. But mainly it is a chance to tell others what they mean to you. Free Study Guide You Can Print and Use! Duties of a Family and Friend To a Person Who Has Been Sick Just as we have been given the duty to care for people in the hospital or nursing home, the same sense of duty applies to those who are at home. Depending on the severity of the illness, you might be doing most of the work at home. As a friend or family member, you may even be taking over the role of nurse, caregiver, or help to someone who has been sick. Find some old clothes in which your loved one can wear. You might want to find someone who might be able to give your loved one a bath or a shower. If you have a washing machine, try to wash some of the clothes in a neutral colored detergent. Try to keep everything very soft and fluffly. If you know of anyone who can make a cold compress for your loved one, ask them if they would be willing to make one for your loved one.
