A new series of future-war narratives that evoke the spirit of the BattleTech universe.Q: Mysql like problem I have got a MySQL like query, which is not working as expected. My query is: select * from table where id=8 and field like "%\blah%" My problem is that I get only one row. If I use select * from table where id=8 and field like "%\blah%" I get no row as expected. Can someone explain why I have to escape "" symbol? A: Normally you don't escape it in MySQL since it's not stored in the database. Normally you escape strings you use as arguments for functions in your queries. "You should never ever put % into a string unless you have to..." So, use the percent sign by itself, and then escape the \ if needed in your query. 2d92ce491b
