A new set of operational metrics were developed for a previous project, and the project team wanted to make the collected metrics available to the external community. Q: how to replace a html file with a.sh file in vim I have a.html file in the folder, which contains some form with a textarea. I want to replace the file with a.sh file. How to do this in vim? A: This is usually done by first saving the.html and then executing the.sh file: :w !/path/to/file.sh However, I strongly suggest to change the.sh file to a vim script (or to a.vim file) instead. This will allow you to execute the script from within vim. 2nd New Mexico Infantry Regiment
