resection of carcinoma

of the pylorus--case report]. The authors present the case of a male patient who was referred to the Center of Surgical Oncology of St. Luke's University Medical Center for a suspected carcinoma of the pylorus. The patient's medical history was remarkable for previous surgical procedures. Physical examination revealed a jaundiced abdomen.

Under general anesthesia, laparotomy showed the presence of a tumor of the pyloric canal. After an informed consent, we performed a transverse pancreaticojejunostomy, a gastrojejunostomy, and a duodenojejunostomy. A loop of the jejunum was exteriorized through a longitudinal incision of the abdominal wall, a Hartmann's procedure was performed, and the jejunum was resected by a circular stapler. The patient was discharged from the hospital after 28 days and scheduled for radiological examinations. The histological examination revealed an adenocarcinoma of the pylorus. Twenty-four months after the procedure, the patient underwent an elective total gastrectomy, a splenectomy, and a D2 lymphadenectomy. The patient was discharged after six months and no complaints of dyspepsia or jaundice were noticed. We report the clinical case and we discuss the technical aspects of the performed procedure.
