Page one is the main page and it contains a link to another page. When I click the link it redirects to another page and displays the content of that page. I want to get the title of the main page and display it on the new page. How can I do that? I am using the following code. var articleTitle = window.location.href; document.getElementById("navB").innerHTML = articleTitle; A: When you open a new page, I assume it is not in the same domain so you can not access the title from there. If you open a new page and pass in the title from a parent page then you can use that My new page Then in the new page you can do `document.getElementById("navB").innerHTML = window.location.href; var newTitle = window.location.href.split('?id=')[1]; document.getElementById("navB").innerHTML = newTitle;` This assumes that the new page has id of navB in its html. 4 Ariz.
