While the newer version of Photoshop, version CS6, is hugely expensive and out of the range of most designers, Photoshop Elements 13 is now part of Photoshop CC 2017, which is quite affordable. I personally don't use Photoshop Elements. I like using the newer version of Photoshop because I don't need to learn how to use different tools and methods in Elements. I am a full time graphic designer who makes a living with Photoshop. The latest version of Photoshop, Photoshop CC 2017, includes all the features of a professional version but with a much simpler user interface and a much more friendly price tag. Q: Circular UIView not aligned to the center, but to the last element in UIScrollView. My problem is, as title says, that Circular UIView (UIView subclass) is not aligned to the center of a UIScrollView, but to the last element in UIScrollView. I have tried, as I've read from other topics, to init Circular UIImageView with UIScrollView, but it looks like that nothing happened to UIScrollView. Should I assign a frame for Circular UIView somehow? Or is there a better way to get the view right? A: You can offset a view by animating a transform on a CGAffineTransformMakeScale(1.0, -1.0) from the center point. Then, shift the transformOrigin when the animation ends: - (void)doAnimation { self.circularView.transform = CGAffineTransformMakeScale(1.0, -1.0); [UIView animateWithDuration:0.7f animations:^(self.circularView.transform = CGAffineTransformMakeScale(1.0, 1.0);]]; } - (void)animationDidEnd { self.circularView.transformOrigin = CGPointMake(self.circularView.center.x, -self.circularView.center.y); } Fungal endophthalmitis: a study of 17 cases.
