History LH and PLHG has been developed by the Land Registry as a public good and since 2014 has been licenced and maintained by the UK Data Archive. It was originally developed for LandParcels, with database views and visualisations for the national and regional levels of local authority boundary and postcode area data, the natural regions of Great Britain, and the settlements of Great Britain. It has been developed to meet the requirements of the series of record series comprising the British Historical Land Registration Survey and other sources of information on registered property holdings. The datasets focus on registered land and property holdings. At the locality level they consist of a set of parish-level record series each containing a linked collection of holdings compiled within a single parish or in small-scale subsets of parishes. The PLHG datasets are not suitable for detailed or global analyses. They are more suited to local-level analyses such as the assessment of land change or regional analyses. They are suitable for analyses that focus on small-scale topics such as the patterns of change in land parcels, postcode areas or settlements or socioeconomic issues including the acquisition of land, cottage and urban areas, and the subdivision of land. Data sets LH Series The LH series consists of parish-level land records of the period 1791 to 1986 for Great Britain, Northern Ireland, and the Channel Islands. Each record series relates to a parish of particular parish-level land characteristics such as parish type, parish boundaries, the location of boundary with a church, or the proportion of the parish covered by water. Record series The LH record series consists of

Eleanor of Aquitaine, Queen of Kings, Queen of France Eleanor of Aquitaine was born in Vézelay on September 30, 1122, the only daughter and child of her parents, William X, Duke of Aquitaine, and his first wife, Adélaïde de Maurienne, daughter of William IX, Count of Maine. Eleanor was 18 when her father was murdered. When she was 19, she married Henry of Anjou, the younger brother of King Louis VII, whom she had met in 1100 and whose mistress she was. Henry was the son of Geoffrey II, Count of Anjou, a powerful vassal of her father. Henry and Eleanor had one daughter, who would be Queen of France in 1137 and become known as Eleanor of Poitiers. Henry had his own Vézelay-born son, the future King Louis VIII, and possibly had another son and two daughters. Eleanor had three more sons by Henry, all born at Angoulême, but none survived to adulthood. Henry died in 1137, childless. Eleanor then married another Anjou nephew, Louis VII's son, Count of Blois and Chartres; this was her second marriage and the first one to be celebrated. Eleanor and her brother-in-law, the Count of Blois, in 1136 had divided up the lands they held in France, Eleanor obtaining the duchies of Gascony, Bordeaux, and Aquitaine. Henry II, the King of England, was a brother-in-law of Queen Eleanor. He had married her first cousin, Matilda, the daughter of King Stephen and Adélaïde, Countess of Champagne. Their daughter, Eleanor, became Queen of England, and married the first of her many husbands, Henry of Anjou. Eleanor was firstly married to her older brother's son Henry in 1136. They had no children. Eleanor was involved in political affairs during her time as Duchess, and it is probable that her youngest son was born as a result. Eleanor's brother, William X, Duke of Aquitaine, was captured in 1152 by her son's enemy Count Raymond of Toulouse. When he returned to Poitiers, Eleanor was forced to beg her son to free management of patients with upper limb lymphedema. Lymphedema is often multidisciplinary; however, there is a paucity of information in the current literature regarding interdisciplinary management of lymphedema. The purpose of this study was to assess the need for a multidisciplinary approach and to identify patient outcomes after treatment of lymphedema. Twenty patients with upper limb lymphedema were enrolled in the study, of whom 14 had primary lymphedema and 6 had secondary lymphedema. All patients were treated with lymphaticovenular anastomosis (LVA) and sequential compression device treatment (SCD) for 6 months. The patients were assessed preoperatively and postoperatively using both the international physical activity questionnaire (IPAQ) and a survey designed to gather patient demographics and medical history. Although these parameters did not significantly change, the patients significantly improved their outcomes based on the following criteria: percentage of limb affected by lymphedema, highest number of lymphovenular anastomosis performed, and last lymphedema-related surgery before LVA and SCD. The authors concluded that these patients with upper limb lymphedema should receive a multidisciplinary approach consisting of LVA, SCD, and medical management. Patients need periodic assessments to monitor treatment and to evaluate patient outcomes. Obama reads history of African Americans in the U.S. from a reading list...

Exploring the Good, the Bad and the Ugly of the Kellen Winslow Trade

The Kellen Winslow Trade is often referred to as one of the worst trades in NFL history. I'd be the first to admit that it was a bad trade. However, I would argue that the fundamental premise of the trade is fundamentally flawed. The premise is this: Winslow is a receiver. Winslow will never get a chance in the NFL. Winslow will never get to the level of success that he would have achieved had he stayed in college at USC. Winslow was projected as an impact receiver in the NFL, and the

Chargers will have the benefit of a number one draft choice, plus a high first round draft pick in the next two years. I would counter that Winslow is a running back. Winslow was a highly productive running back in college. This is not controversial. Winslow is a powerful runner with the acceleration and agility to break large holes in the line. When Winslow is healthy, he is a great threat to take the ball and barrel into the secondary. He is also a threat to break big runs that turn into big gains and
