Don't get me wrong; I understand why he chose this time to vent. This football season has been a mess, and I imagine there are a lot of people inside the Jaguars' facility who feel the same. But a teammate texting you that you're "a dick," much less a teammate who delivered it to the media, is a bit much. Brilliant point. Jaguars' Avon Cobbs had texted Allen last month, according to Allen: I've grown sick and tired of this * right here. Start acting like a little * and maybe you'll get the product you want. At least, that's Allen's version. Former NFL player Brian Allen doesn't care for the way rookie cornerback Jalen Ramsey yelled at him in the locker room and vowed to "smack him," the way the fourth-year pro had texted his teammate Avon Cobbs in the past month. Ladies and gentlemen, we can't have any more catfights in the locker room. "It really wasn't nothing," Allen said. "It was just me being careless." The texts were supposedly about the Jaguars' muffed punt after they relinquished a seven-point lead and ultimately lost at New England, although Allen was quoted in the stories that he was not mad at Ramsey. This is, of course, the same Ramsey who said earlier this week that he hears his quarterback, Blake Bortles, is a "cancer." What a monster. What is it about Ramsey that makes him such an unbearable human being? I've never met the guy. How is it I'm supposed to know what's going on inside his head? But I do know this: I've been in the locker room with some exceptional professionals over the course of my career who have been deeply frustrated with a teammate's behavior, and I know the impact it has on the rest of the team. When you have a player that erratic — or a teammate that erratic — the whole room has to suffer because the players are forced to tune everything out, to block everything out. You could have the best chemistry, but if you have one guy who's cussing at you, you can't do your job. Allen made that pretty clear. "I just try to stay ready, stay in a good state of mind," he said. "I hate those types of guys in this locker room."

Two supplemental Ca concentrations (5 and 10% limestone) were included in all diets. In Exp. 1, skin zinc and copper contents were significantly higher (P
